Improve cyber threat resilience while ensuring compliance

Designing cyber threat resilience into your compliance framework.

Organizations routinely confuse achieving compliance and achieving cyber threat resilience as the same thing.

While achieving cyber threat resilience and achieving compliance are two different things they are not mutually incompatible.

It is possible to design a policy and procedure framework that takes both these goals into account and achieve them cost effectively without compromising on either. Our practice shows you how.

Regulatory compliance due to SOX, HIPPA, PCI, GLBA, FISMA, OMB, or other state or federal standards is a fact of life. Unfortunately most organizations rely on these compliance standards as their sole cybersecurity strategy. Since these standards do not know about your business and your risks, they are generic and lead you in the direction of fortress building. This does not lead to good outcomes in terms of cybersecurity.

However it is possible to take into account your Crown Jewels and critical risks while framing the policies and procedures so that cyber threat resilience is baked into your compliance framework.

Call us now and get started on your journey to compliance and cyber threat resilience.
